State Secretary Speaks On Women In Politics

By GIOIA De BLASIO
Staff Writer

March Fong Eu, California's Secretary of State, addressed students on the emerging role of women in politics for Women's Awareness Week in Monarch Hall yesterday.

"I'm delighted to be here celebrating this week in particular, as this is one of the largest community colleges in the state headed by a woman," Eu said.

"We have a very rapidly changing world. I see men increasingly as companions rather than as competitors," Eu continued.

Eu, who has served for four terms in the California Legislature before becoming Secretary of State, has a masters degree from Mills College, where she has also taught, and a doctor of education degree from Stanford University.

"The law itself is changing, and I believe it is changing for the better. I hope that someday the Equal Rights Amendment will be part of the Federal Constitution," Eu said.

Eu pointed out to the crowd that there are 42 million women working in the country today, many work out of necessity. "Nine out of 10 women will work for 30 or more years," she continued.

Eu believes that "women can be realistically optimistic about the future."

Eu, who is presently serving her second term as Secretary of State, was also a division chairperson at the University of California at San Francisco.

"The good news is that God is coming. The bad news is that she's very angry," Eu said.

Thurston Plans Fall Retirement

By BRIAN DEAGON
News Editor

After more than 25 years of service in community colleges, Dr. Alice Thurston announced Tuesday her retirement as president of Los Angeles Valley College.

As the fifth president of the Van Nuys campus, Thurston's retirement becomes effective on August 31 and will culminate six years of service as the executive chief.

"Valley College has been the most interesting, exciting, and most vital college I've been around," she said.

Her career has spanned five community college systems nationwide, as well as teaching at five universities. She was president of Garber Junior College in Boston before coming to Valley.

Perhaps the greatest satisfaction for me is one that doesn't show," she related. "It's the splendid relations with the community. I've worked hard to that end," she said.

Not surprisingly, the Van Nuys Chamber of Commerce recently awarded LAVC for outstanding and exemplary involvement and support in the Van Nuys community.

"This will be my first sabbatical in 43 years in the field of education," Thurston said.

One of her major projects at Valley included plans for a Cultural Arts Center, a 1,200-seat auditorium that would service, not only students, but the entire San Fernando Valley.

The plans were developed carefully, Thurston said, but are now waiting for a funding source.

She also stimulated development of the S/He (Students for Humanistic Exploration) Center.

"Women have achieved a great deal of progress, but there is still a long way to go," she said.

Her duties within the community colleges included teaching, counseling, director of admissions, dean of students, director of institutional research, and coordinator of student personnel services.

She has two children, Anne and Robert, who are doctoral students in anthropology and Russian history respectively.

Low Funds Hold Back LAVC Mail

By PATTY MAZZONE

Mail does not always go through. For the past week outgoing campus mail which needs to be metered has been stacking up in Valley College's mailroom, reported Johanna Each, intermediate clerk typist who supervises the mailroom.

Transcripts, Business Office checks, and financial aid materials are included in this pile.

"It's basically the day-to-day business done by the school by mail," she said.

The delay, which was rectified yesterday morning, began last Thursday when the metering machine dispensed its last penny, explained Each.

"We simply ran out of money," said Dr. Alice J. Thurston, president of Valley.

Responding to Thurston's statement, Each said, "Too bad (Dr. Leslie) Kolai (chancellor of the Los Angeles Community College District) can't divert some of the $8,200 from the feasibility study for the (proposed) 11th college."

Mary Ann Breckell, coordinator of administrative services, agrees with Thurston.

"The problem," she said, "is the budget is getting tighter."

A request to the LACCD for a transfer of budget funds will be decided upon at the next Board of Trustees meeting on March 25, stated Breckell.

On Jan. 7 $4,905 was installed in the machine, commented Each. Nine weeks later it ran out. Each said she requested additional funds from administrative services six weeks ago but received no reply.

Valley spends $25,000 annually on postage—an average of $100 daily, she added.

"It's an item in budget we have to watch more closely," said Thurston. "We've gotten overzealous in our (Continued on Page 6, Column 2)

Department Presentations Challenge Sub-Committee

By DAVID P. SCHAMUS
City Editor

Approval of three additional classes to the proposed General Education Certification list at last week's Valley College Curriculum Committee (VCCC) meeting was followed by presentations challenging the exclusion of several classes from the proposed list.

Speech 32, Sociology 6, and Environmental Studies 4 were approved, without objection, by the VCCC, while presentations by the Art, Biology, and Health Education Departments met with opposition from members of the committee.

Chairman of the Biology Department Prof. Gerald Bessey feels that the subcommittee, on general education certification and graduation requirements, is very professional and hard working.

However, he questions the interpretation of course descriptions and California State University (CSU) system guidelines which have affected the subcommittee's proposals.

The Biology Department is challenging the exclusion of Biology 13.

"There is no question this class meets the breadth requirements," said Bessey, adding that, "this class deals with a broad range of principles."

"We are very concerned that we will not maintain enrollment if Biology 13 is not included (in the general education certification list)," said Bessey.

Any time a change is made in requirements, there are some effects on enrollment, said Dr. Fred Machetanz, coordinator of research at Valley.

He notes that approximately 45 percent of Valley's WSCH (weekly student contact hours, the formula by which funding is disbursed) are generated in classes now certified for transfer as meeting general education requirements.

Anatol Mazor, dean of instruction, feels that the subcommittee is making progress. Mazor explained that the recommendations of the subcommittee started narrow and have continued to broaden.

"We need to open it up even more," said Mazor, adding that he feels the subcommittee is listening (to the presentations of concerned departments).

Two workshops, explaining some of the changes in general education, will be presented by the subcommittee in FL 106 on March 23 and 24 at 1 p.m. The workshops will be open to the staff and students of Valley, explained Prof. Val Villa at the recent VCCC meeting.

Cowsill Allegedly Experienced Stress Due To Filed Claims

By G. P. KUBELEK
Special Assignment Editor

Student activist Richard Cowsill, in response to the disability claims filed by several Valley College instructors, made his own allegations of psychological stress at a press conference Tuesday.

Cowsill called the press conference to express a sort of counterpoint to the workmen's compensation claims filed by eight Valley instructors who contend that they have suffered ridicule and damage to their professional reputations.

The former student body president and current candidate for the Los Angeles Community College District (LACCD) Board of Trustees seat No. 4, said he too has suffered "psychological and physical stress" as a result of his allegations of grade fraud at this campus.

The instructors reportedly filed the disability action in lieu of a lawsuit against Cowsill which they claim Cowsill could not pay, should monetary damages be awarded to the instructors.

Cowsill agreed with the assumption that he has no money and said that his "crusade against the deterioration of quality education at Valley" has brought him to the point of destitution.

"My resources have run out," said Cowsill. "I have been fighting these people since 1979." He also announced that he had "gone on Welfare" because his son, Nathaniel, has broken his collarbone and needed "immediate medical attention."

The instructors disability action is against the college district's self insurance program, not State Disability Insurance coverage.

Since the close of the board investigation into Cowsill's charges, Cowsill has aggressively pursued the release of the "Johnson Report" which deals with the investigation, but the district is keeping it confidential because it names the instructors.

Conference Causes Confusion

Holding a press conference at Valley College is easy, but finding out about it is apparently more difficult.

By phone Tuesday morning, the office of Student Affairs told Star on two separate occasions that a press conference called by Richard Cowsill had been cancelled, when in fact, it had not.

Additionally, on both occasions women who answered the phone refused to identify themselves. Star later learned, however, that both women were secretaries in the employ of the Office of Student Affairs.

Ray Follosco, coordinator of that office, said that he would assume responsibility for the matter, and that problem was simply a matter of semantics: The conference itself had not been cancelled, only a request to use a room on campus.

The request was denied because the club sponsoring the event (Public Relations) was deemed invalid due to discrepancies in its duty roster. Student Body President Suheil Ghareib was listed as the club's secretary treasurer. Ghareib denied this, but added that he was a member.

District Creativity Considered In LACCD Sponsored Book

By BRIAN DEAGON
News Editor

A project that was nixed three years ago with the advent of Proposition 13 has been regenerated by Los Angeles Community College District (LACCD) Chancellor Dr. Leslie Kolai.

Action has begun on the production of a journal that would publish creative writing, art, and photography by district employee's, and would be financed by district-wide funds. The funds would be drawn from next year's budget at a cost of $12,750, considered to be a "rough estimate" by Linda Thor, LACCD Communication Services, who is on the Journal's Board of Directors.

Approximately 3,000 to 5,000 copies of the book, with 60-72 pages projected, will be distributed free to district employees. A limited number will be mailed to other colleges and institutions and to civic leaders, Thor said.

The book will include poems, stories, commentary, essays, and black and white photographs. To promote the literary and artistic creativity of LACCD personnel and to improve communication in the district is the stated intention of the journal. It is also intended to be a stimulus for district employees and to serve as a vehicle for sharing ideas with others in higher education.

"We don't have a publication in the district that reflects the talents and creativity of our people," said Thor. The journal would be the first of its kind and is intended to achieve such a purpose.

The idea for a journal was generated in 1978 by Kolai, after he conferred with other board members and district employees.

The proposed budget for the original journal was $12,070, which did not include some miscellaneous expenses.

Kolai appointed an editor-in-chief for the new journal, who in turn selected an operating staff.

Editor-in-Chief Darrell Eckersley, from the English Department at Southwest College, will be given a six-week summer assignment as a temporary consulting instructor for the journal.

Eckersley appointed English Profs. Charles Kopff from Pierce College and Catherine Hershberger from L.A. Trade-Technical College as the editorial staff. They will be paid an hourly wage as a supplemental assignment which is limited to 200 hours combined time.

Managing editor is Barbara Friedman, who will work on the journal as a part of her regular duties in Communication Services.

Typesetting, layout, and graphic support will also be done by district personnel.

Tentatively, there are seven people on the Journal's Board of Directors which Kolai will chair. The board members will not receive compensation, stated Thor.

Opinion

STAR EDITORIALS

The Valley Star's position on issues is discussed only in the editorials presented on this page. Star editorials are the unanimous viewpoint of the Editorial Board of this newspaper. Columns and cartoons on this page are the opinions of individual staff members, as credited on the material. Such opinions expressed in either editorials, columns, or cartoons do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the student body or the administration and staff of this college.

Unfit To Print

At a time when the 10 Los Angeles District Community Colleges are cutting deeply into programs to allay budget setbacks, Chancellor Leslie Koltai has regenerated an idea that is a poor example of fiscal frugality.

Action has been started by the LACCD to publish a journal of creative expression, including poems, essays, and other stories submitted by district employees.

The expected financial outlay for the journal is presently $12,750, which is a "rough estimate." The funds for this project will be drawn from next year's district-wide budget. Three English professors from district will be hired as special assignment editors.

At least 3,000 copies of the collegiate style journal will be printed and distributed free to district employees.

Ironically production of a journal similar to the one now being prepared was underway in 1978. It was cancelled then because of Proposition 13 cutbacks.

The fact that it wasn't feasible then but apparently is plausible now is an enigma. It would seem to indicate that the District feels the financial outlook is brighter.

The sad truth is in light of President Reagan's announced budget cuts in education, the situation is much worse.

Last week Koltai stated the financial restraints levied on the LACCD and the impact of federal programs cuts will mean greater hardships for the persons at the bottom of the socio-economic scale. He also announced that veterans' services, CETA, and programs for the handicapped will impact community colleges. Indeed, budget cuts jeopardize the quality of education for all students.

Exactly how the District intends to deal with this situation is yet to be seen. But picking up the tab on a journal of creative expression is, indeed, setting a bad example for the community colleges.

It seems highly ironic to Star that funds are available to publish a book that essentially is an ego trip for district employees, and does nothing to further the education or artistic expression of the students.

COMMENTARY

Terror in the City

By ELAINE HOCHBERG
Staff Writer

Recently KCET presented a show entitled "The Dream Disturbed." It was about the increasing crime rate in Los Angeles, and gave much insight into the problem.

Los Angeles used to be a beautiful and pastoral city, and now it has become a "Battlefield of terror." The murder rate of Los Angeles is among the highest in the country. Arson and burglary are also high on the list of crimes that plague the city. People are concerned and frightened, and many feel police can no longer protect them.

More people than ever are purchasing burglar alarms. Self-defense classes are packed, and tear gas training classes have increased dramatically.

Still crime continues to flourish.

VIEWPOINT

Significant Scribble

By EILEEN SPENCER
Staff Writer

"I wonder, wall, that you do not go smash who have to bear the weight of all this trash."

This graffiti appeared more than 2,000 years ago on a wall among the buried city of Pompeii.

It's through the graffiti found on walls in caves, buildings, and the pyramids of ancient Egypt that historians have been able to piece together our past.

Is there an innate desire passed down from our ancestors to write on walls? Give a young child a pencil or crayon and the child will head straight for the wall.

The erotic graffiti found in Pompeii reflects the relaxed attitudes Pompeians had toward sex. The walls of Valley College restrooms could give the same reflection to some historian 2,000 years from now.

The writings won't enrich the world, but they are the composite of someone's thoughts, thoughts they think should be shared.

The writer seldom knows how his words are received. Sometimes comments are added. Does he/she return to check?

No matter how superbly the writer, in a burst of enthusiasm, has conceived and executed the material, it can't be considered for the Pulitzer Prize.

It's read because it's there. The closeness of walls in restroom stalls puts the words right before the viewers eyes. No one goes there specifically to read what's on the walls. That's not the purpose.

Our restrooms have become a marketplace to release bottled up diversities. The atmosphere should be taken in account. There's the quietness of a felt pen, and privacy behind a locked door. No one knows who's there or will know who ever has been there.

While the graffiti syndrome continues here at Valley, 2,000 years from now some writer may take pen in hand and try to explain the rhetoric graffiti on the walls.

LETTERS TO THE STAR

Salvadoran Reply

Esther Sorkin (Letters to the Star, March 12) seems to know nothing about the beliefs of those of us who oppose current U.S. policy in El Salvador.

Ms. Sorkin informs us that "our government has obtained absolute documentary evidence which proves that the revolutionaries in El Salvador are being supplied arms" by several communist countries.

May I point out to Ms. Sorkin that former U.S. ambassador to El Salvador (during the Kennedy administration) Murat W. Williams said the U.S.-backed junta probably fabricated evidence of Cuban support for the rebel groups (L.A. Times, March 10).

Furthermore, if this evidence is so "absolute" how come only one other Democratic nation (Great Britain) has supported current U.S. policy in El Salvador? The authenticity of the documents is, at best, questionable.

The belief that the junta is moderate or reform-minded is a myth. According to Catholic Church sources in El Salvador, the military forces of the government are responsible for 80 percent of the more than 9,000 political murders in 1980.

Regarding reform, part of the junta's agrarian reform program was conceived by Roy Prosterman. Prosterman is the same gentleman who produced the disastrous "Land of the Tiller" reform program in Vietnam.

To quote the great English philosopher John Stuart Mill, "he who only knows his own side of the case, knows little of that."

Found It!

It has been a wonderful experience for me in my relations with all Valley College students.

Recently, a student turned in intact to the Lost and Found Dept. my wallet which I had lost in the men's room in the Journalism Building.

I want to thank the above mentioned person for strengthening my belief in honesty and integrity of the people on this campus.

Club Day Takes 'Pride' in Valley

Food, fun, music, and entertainment headlined the Club Day festivities last Thursday in the Free Speech Area. Thirty clubs participated in this semester's event.

Club displays were judged in four categories. The Korean Club was awarded for overall excellence, Vietnamese Club for food; Knights and Coronets for display, and Dance Club for entertainment. Special recognition was given to the Cheerleaders.

This semester the format for Club Day was different from past presentations. Booths were set up in the Free Speech Area instead of in Monarch Square. Clubs were set up in areas sectioned for food and display. Entertainment was held on the Free Speech platform.

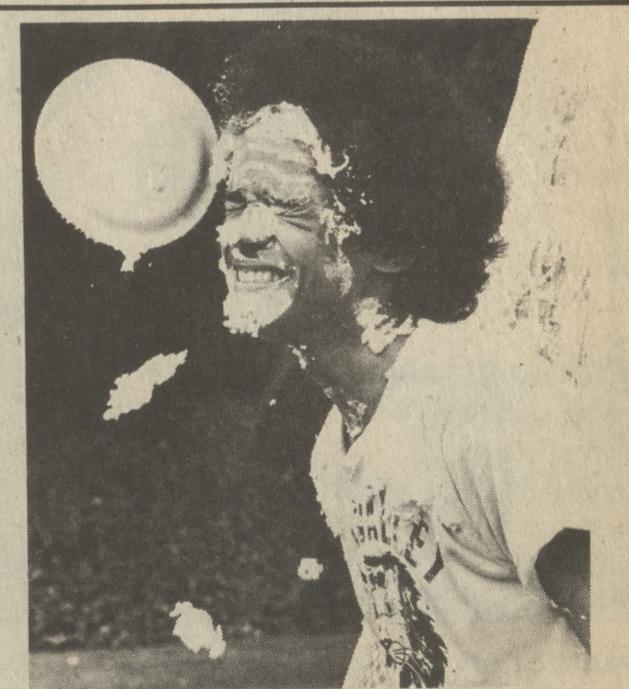

Marsha Tauber, Associated Student Body vice-president and chairperson of the Inter-Organization Council, said this format will be used for future Club Days.

"It went over very well this semester. We felt that if we moved it down (to the Free Speech Area) there would be more response," Tauber added.

Victorious Hockey Club Beats Cal Tech, 5-3

By SHELLY SMILOVE

Each game is an instant replay of the last.

The Valley College Hockey Club just does not know the meaning of the word LOSE, at least not when it applies to them.

The state championship is well within their grasp. The Hockey Club now holds a 9-7 record, with seven consecutive wins.

March 16 saw these Monarchs win over Cal Tech, 5-3. Newcomer Jeff Rector scored the first Valley goal eight minutes into the game. After the remaining minutes of the first period dragged on, Valley came onto the ice full of "Go Get 'Em" power, but to their avail only one point was scored by Kari Passi with an assist by Mark Cooper.

The third period was the most exciting for both sides. Valley was down one man for the last 10 minutes of the game due to a roughing charge, which put the pressure on the Monarchs. Although they were ahead 2-0 at the beginning of the third period, the tide quickly changed.

Cal Tech came back and brought the score to within one by a score from Mike Friedman. Then, to everyone's amazement, Valley scored three consistent goals, one right after the other.

The three goals from Danny Champagne, Rector, and Gary Schoor, helped to give the Monarchs quite an advantage.

Perhaps the main reason that Valley did so well was that goalie Tony Buchard was literally on top of the puck. Buchard made 24 saves and let only three get by him.

With only 30 seconds left in the game, Valley was ahead, 5-1. Two goals from Greg Yates and Steve Lamarche helped Cal Tech narrow the score, but Valley still had the lead when the buzzer sounded.

Valley's next game is tonight against UCLA in Culver City. Directions for the game can be obtained from either Shelly Smilove, sports editor in BJ 114, or Dave Norton, commissioner of sports, in the ASB office.

LAVC steamrolls its way through the Metro conference already 4-0 for the season, the swimmers drowned Long Beach by 40 points last Friday at Long Beach.

Valley scored nine first places out of a possible eleven events as they beat LBCC 71-41.

Valley opened the meet with five consecutive first places, then scored a second in diving. Three more first places were scored after the diving.

First places were scored by Randy Hoehn, Todd Morse, Jim Roberts,

Carlo Spiga in the Medley Relay; Bruce Mori in the 1000 freestyle, Hoehn in the 200 and the 500 freestyle, Spiga in the 50 and 100 yard freestyle; Roberts in the 200 yard butterfly; and Morse in the 100 yard individual medley and the 200 yard breaststroke.

The Monarchs scored nine second places. Steve Moseley scored two second places, along with Jim Armstrong, and Jim Beaudry. Other first places were scored by Bill Watkins, Thomas Tinny, and Mori.

Valley will take on El Camino tomorrow there at 2:30 p.m.

They faced a tough schedule and beat the odds by coming out well ahead.

The now 5-1 Monarch Baseball team played four games last week and won three. Bakersfield, Long Beach, El Camino, and Pierce were the opponents.

Bakersfield was the first victim that fell into Valley's clutches. And it was a long fall. The final score, 13-1, resulted because the Renegades made four errors with men on base. Valley pitcher Tim Coop recorded the win. He gave up only three hits, while Valley accumulated 14.

The next team to fall prey to Valley was Long Beach, 10-4.

Rookie Valley pitcher Jeff Salazar recorded the win after pitching for six straight innings. All of the Monarchs played well offensively, hitting a total of nine runs, including four hit by shortstop Doug Baker. Baker got another grand slam to his credit.

Pitcher Rob Sullivan took the loss for Valley as it was beaten by first-ranked El Camino, 5-3.

The big upset of the week was the Valley-Pierce game where Valley literally wiped Pierce off the field, 20-2. A combination of Valley pitchers Gene Lamberts, Hans Ibsen, Greg Martin, and Tim Coop were mainly responsible for the Pierce loss as the Brahmas managed only six hits totaling two runs.

"I think it was our key hits that helped make all the big plays," explained Martin calmly. "This time (against Pierce) we did it without the long ball."

No grand slams or triples, but the singles and doubles added up, all the way to 20. George Page, Kent Testerman, and Baker each hit doubles and singles to push their team to the win. Pierce, like Bakersfield, was not alert on the field and made six errors.

Valley, now in second place in Metro, will face Long Beach Saturday at Long Beach at noon.

Student Musical Opens Tonight

By JAN BERMAN
Staff Writer

Tonight at 8:30, "Hollywood and Vine" opens in the Little Theater at Valley College.

"Hollywood and Vine" is good fun.

In these days of little true entertainment, "Hollywood and Vine" entertains. It's nostalgia. It's every reason you ever bought a ticket for a show or stayed up late to see a rerun on "Movies 'Til Dawn."

It has brightness and silly schtick.

It has musical score that sends you out of the theater with some tunes still running around in your head.

It has plenty of laughs, and they're even meant to be there. Some are the kind of tried-and true corny ones that you smile and giggle at in spite of yourself.

It's a helluva production. One thing for sure, everyone worked. Writers, directors, choreographers, actors and actresses, singers, dancers, set designers, tech crew, costumers, musicians. EVERYONE, has done a job they can be proud of.

When the lights dim, Mr. Wonderful takes you through a magic land that lies right in our backyard. Sometimes the trip slows down, and sometimes it moves so fast it leaves you a little breathless.

Whether it's the prostitutes or the ingenue, the pimp, pusher, or would-be star, the special effects or the corny situations, it's really Hollywood.

I've heard it said that if you stood at the corner of Hollywood and Vine, eventually everyone in the world would pass by. Maybe that isn't true, but if you sit in the audience of "Hollywood and Vine," you'll have a good time.

Modern Romance

Love, Audience Lost In New Brooks Film

By G.P. Kubelek
Special Assignment Editor

Los Angeles Police, March 2, walked onto the set of MGM studios' "Cannery Row" and arrested cinematographer Peter Santoro for the alleged theft of more than $1.4 million in raw stock film at Universal Studios.

The point of this, is that after the press preview of "Modern Romance" a new comedy starring Albert Brooks, it is apparent that Santoro stole the wrong film.

Had he stolen "Romance," at worst, he would have been charged with a misdemeanor.

Now back to the film: "Modern Romance," at the very least, is a very funny film. The whole however does not equal the sum of its parts.

Film audiences, spoiled as they are, have come to expect things like plot development, editing acumen, and a certain amount of taste in exchange for their money.

Brooks, who directed and co-wrote the film, plays film editor Robert Cole, obsessed by love and its terrible implications.

The film is Cole's story. He is in the process of editing a sci fi epic that serves as a springboard in the movie for a satire on the movie industry and the Southern California lifestyle complete with Porsches, jogging shoes and drugs.

Indeed, near the beginning of "Romance" there is a long scene involving Cole and a seemingly vast quantity of Quaaludes.

"Romance" is littered with famous (and nearly famous) cameos: George Kennedy, Meadowlark Lemon, and Bob Einstein, and it does certainly have its wry moments.

One wonders, however as the final credits roll down the screen, if the real editor of "Modern Romance" wasn't seduced by the same carnal depravity as his on-screen counterpart, thus causing a waste of perfectly good celluloid.

'Modern Romance' Dinner for Two

If it's not love, what is it? It's a free Chinese Mandarin dinner for two or some free movie tickets, that's what it is.

In "Modern Romance," Albert Brooks suggests some modern answers. The contemporary comedy centers on Hollywood film editor Robert Cole (Brooks) whose romance with beautiful bank officer, Mary Harvard (Kathryn Harrold) has reached a point of no return.

"We've all been there," says Brooks. "You make the final, irrevocable decision that it's over. Then you get home and think, 'My god, what have I done?'"

What are your "modern" answers to, "How to leave your lover — and then go back?" Bring your answers (at least 5) to the Valley Star office, BJ114. The best 25 will receive a screening test pass for two to see Columbia Pictures' "Modern Romance."

The creator of the most imaginative "modern" answer will win a FREE romantic (we hope) Chinese dinner for two at Peilin Restaurant. Winners will be announced in the March 26 issue. Please include your name and phone number on entries. Deadline is Monday, March 23, at 1 p.m.

LAVC Opera Unusual Style

By ELAINE HOCHBERG
Staff Writer

Sex and seduction were given a new and amusing twist last Thursday when the LAVC Music Department presented "Robert Chauls' Opera Highlights" in the Music Recital Hall.

The program consisted of six musical examples of seduction scenes in opera.

To open the show, two singers performed a scene from "Don Giovanni" by Mozart. In this scene Don Juan, who has made conquests all over the world, attempts to seduce a young peasant girl named Zerlina the day before he is supposed to marry another woman.

Next a scene from Carmen unfolds in which a fiery young lady espouses her philosophy of love to two soldiers.

"Carmen," written by Georges Bizet, is the story of a girl who works in a cigarette factory.

"La Boheme," by Giacomo Puccini, is one of the most charming stories in all opera. It takes place on Christmas Eve when Rodolfo, a young poet, meets a girl named Mimi. Mimi is locked out of her apartment and Rodolfo helps her look for the key. In the dark he grabs her hand and tries to kiss her.

"The Ballad of Baby Doe" was the only opera that was sung in English. In the first act Baby Doe, who has just arrived in town, is introduced to a man 30 years her senior.

A scene from "Rigoletto" ended the show. In the scene Rigoletto hires Sparafucila, a professional assassin, to murder a duke who raped his daughter, Gilda.

Dr. Robert Chauls, music director of Valley Opera, accompanied the singers on piano.

After each scene Chauls gave a short lecture in which he explained more about the opera and its composer.

Singers Angela Blasi, Lori Green, Mary Heyler, Robin Reed, and Richard Wagner were all professionals. Whether soprano, baritone, tenor, or mezzo-soprano, all sang with amazing force and expression.

"Opera Highlights" was a colorful and intriguing recital. It increased awareness of opera and how entertaining it can be.

District Budget Looks Dim

By G.P. KUBELEK
Special Assignment Editor

Influxes of student refugees will cause financial hardships for community colleges, predicted Leslie Koltai Los Angeles Community College District Chancellor last week.

The refugees that Koltai said he anticipates will be students from four-year schools who, because of President Reagan's budget cuts, will turn to the community colleges as an alternative to the more expensive universities.

"These budget cuts will put us squarely between a rock and a hard place," said Koltai about the financial impact of anticipated large enrollment increases in the district.

Koltai said he expects 500,000 to 750,000 students to drop out entirely from college when budget cuts take their full effect.

Most of Reagan's educational cutbacks involved a restructuring of the financial aid programs available to college students. It is apparently part of Reagan's "truly needy doctrine."

Citing already record high enrollment (second highest in the district's history) and a possible $6 million decline in district revenues, Koltai said, "This is an intolerable situation."

"This is the most difficult situation I have faced since I came to this district nine years ago," he said. The community college's open door policy is in jeopardy."

Koltai finds Reagan's proposal of funding post secondary education through block grants, appealing. He said that would return local control, in some measures, to college districts.

Mandatory Fee Vetoed By Ghareib

By STEVE APPLEFORD
Managing Editor

Associated Student Body Executive Council resolved Tuesday to make student fees mandatory, but the resolution was immediately vetoed by ASB President Suheel Ghareib.

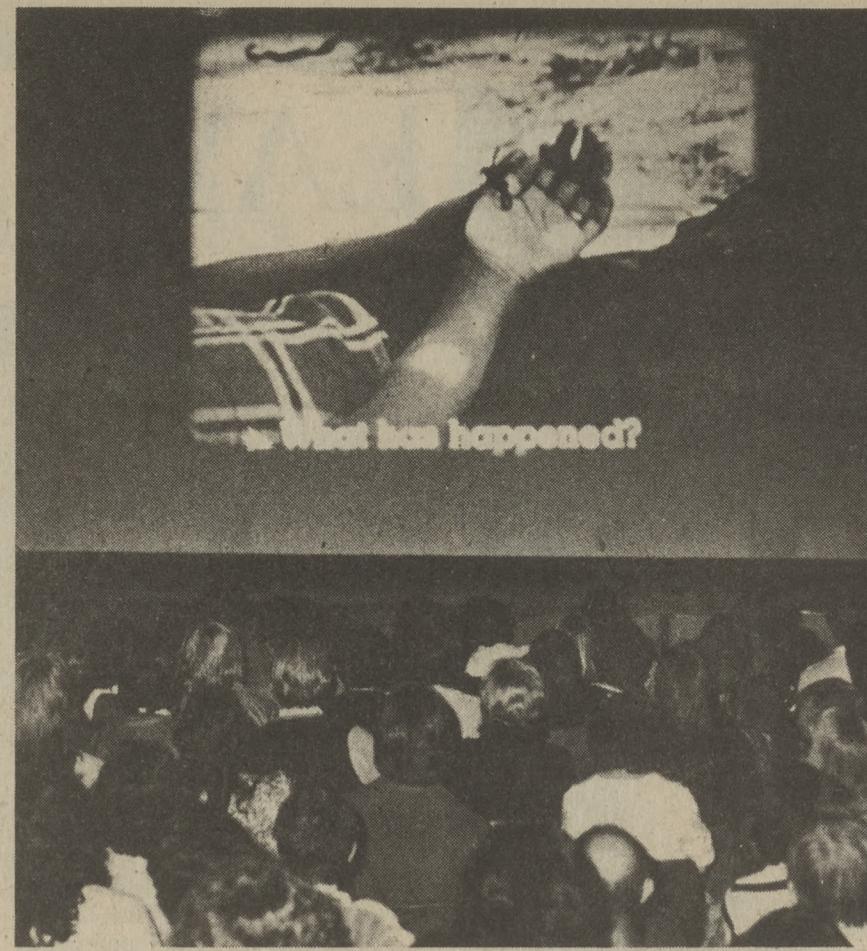

The resolution, which passed with a six-to-five vote, stated that all Valley College students would be required to pay the now optional ASB membership fee.

"I have never seen a case where the student body president has vetoed a decision right then and there," said Ray Follisco, coordinator of student affairs and adviser to ASB.

A member of the Executive Council, who asked not to be named, favored the resolution and said, "What we're trying to do is get around tuition, which may be inevitable after Reagan makes his budget cuts."

However, others disagreed, saying that California is the only state that doesn't yet charge tuition and to let ASB charges become mandatory would be like "opening up a can of worms." Follisco, who favored the council's decision, pointed out a few theories about the resolution.

"If students had to pay some type of fee, or tuition, the drop rate would probably be much lower," he said. "I believe people would think twice before dropping out after paying a fee."

Each disagrees.

"Since Prop. 13 hardly any waste in outgoing mail has gone through this office. The teaching staff has voluntarily cut," she said.

Breckell stated the metering machine has locked three times this fiscal year.

"If it happens again," she stressed, "there are no places to get money."

With the Prop. 13 trim and double-digit inflation, she explained, funds have been used to the maximum. Few places exist to find money.

In light of the postage increase all agree the problem will be worse next year.

To help avoid this situation in the future, the Office of Administrative Services plans to conduct a "guidelines for postage" survey, said Breckell.

"As far as I'm concerned," Each emphasized, "there's no excuse for it happening in the first place."

El Salvador Teach-In Opposes Involvement

By GIOIA De BLASIO
Staff Writer

A film and lecture on the current situation in El Salvador drew record numbers of Valley College students, including many who sat on the floor or stood at the back of Monarch Hall, last week. The "Committee in Solidarity with the People of El Salvador" (CISPES), a national coalition, and the Associated Student Body (ASB) at Valley sponsored a "teach-in" which included a question and answer period.

After opening remarks by ASB President Suheel Ghareib, Salvadoran refugees, who are presently students at Hollywood High School, performed dances from their native land.

"I have been here for six months. My family left El Salvador because the government wanted to kill us. Someday El Salvador will be free," 15-year-old Salvadoran girl said.

"El Salvador is no longer beautiful," said Sandra Garcis, "Everything is hate. Our country is suffering."

In 1980 more than 10,000 Salvadorans were killed by the country's military, according to CISPES.

Denmark, Sweden, France, Germany. They're all opposing the junta government down there, and we've been arming them for the past 50 years," Mike Vivian, professor of sociology, said.

Members of the panel included Vivian, Farrell Broslawsky, professor of history; Pat Maguire, professor of philosophy; and President of the National Lawyers Guild, John Michael Lee.

According to CISPES, there is a high rate of illiteracy and infant mortality in El Salvador today. One out of every four children will die before reaching five years of age, while the average life span is 46.

Maguire, formerly a Catholic priest, explained his reason for participating in the teach-in.

"I have never taken part in a teach-in before. I feel that this is important," he said.

"Those who go to churches in El Salvador are called communists," Maguire added. "Why does a nice man like Ronald Reagan get involved in the massacring of people?" "The American people have good hearts, but their minds need straightening out."

U.S. military assistance to El Salvador has recently been increased to include helicopters, M-16 rifles, and grenades, according to CISPES.

The Democratic Revolutionary Front (FDR), a coalition with a membership of more than 1 million in a country with a population of 5 million, is one of the stronger groups opposing the military government.

"To be politically left in El Salvador means you get meat once a month," Broslawsky said.

A film, entitled "Revolution or Death," contained explicit footage of victims of the El Salvador Regime's severe cruelty.

Vivian defined war as "something that destroys the products of women's labor: children."

"The hardest burden is on women. They don't make the wars. They have, historically, tried to stop them," Vivian concluded.

The film also included footage of the late Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero, a nominee for the 1979 Nobel Peace Prize, who was killed after calling on soldiers of the armed forces to cease their violent oppression.

Lee explained that no government has yet established a formal refugee center for Salvadorans.

Los Angeles, he continued, has one of the largest areas of Salvadoran refugees.

"Personally, I think that we (the U.S. Government) are backing the wrong team," Lee concluded, in reference to the junta.

The main purpose of the teach-in, said Ghareib, was to educate, although through the four hours no time was spent presenting opposing views.

Vivian defined war as "something that destroys the products of women's labor: children."

"The hardest burden is on women. They don't make the wars. They have, historically, tried to stop them," Vivian concluded.

Coalition Discusses Gay Awareness, Explains Various Types of Prejudice

By GIGIMARIA HOROWITZ

Staff Writer

New awareness of different types of prejudice, oppression, and liberation were discussed by members of the Gay Students Coalition's Speakers Bureau with the students of Prof. Barbara Stoffer's Afro-American in Contemporary Urban Society class last Friday.

"Prejudices against gays reinforces all forms of prejudice," Bob, bureau coordinator, told the students. (The speakers use only their first names.)

"Society's three-pronged attack against gays is that it is 'illegal,' 'immoral,' and 'insane,'" he said.

"Gays enjoy no marital benefits, no death benefits, and no community property rights."

"Gays have existed in all times and places," Bob added. "In ancient Greece and Rome homosexuality was part of the lifestyle. Today, the most common form of institutionalized homosexuality is 'berdache,' transvestite, or most commonly known as cross-dressing."

Gays have a history of oppression. From the 11th to the 18th century in Europe and America, gays were burned as witches. The term "faggot" refers to the bundles of wood that were used at the burnings.

Gays were also oppressed by the Nazis. In 1897, Magnus Hirshfeld established the first gay rights organization. In June 1934, Hitler issued an order to purge all homosexuals from the army. Two-hundred leaders were massacred in Berlin. By 1935, 56,000 homosexuals were castrated and an estimated one-quarter to one-half million homosexuals died in concentration camps.

The homosexuals could not reveal why they were incarcerated because it was against the law, and they would have been returned to prison. The law was abolished in 1969, but they were still considered criminals and were never entitled to restitution.

"Even today in a town like San Francisco, there has been a noticeable rise in violent crimes against gays," Bob told the students.

Gay oppression is felt in jobs also. In 1972 in Tacoma, WA, a high school teacher was fired for admitting to school authorities he was gay. No homosexual conduct was alleged. The case reached the Supreme Court in October 1977. The court refused to hear the case.

There are no laws (except for some municipal statutes) protecting gays from loss of employment. A military ban on homosexuals still exists, and gays cannot rise in high government offices requiring security clearance.

"Gays experience a rejection of family and friends, forcing them to lead double lives, which never really
